Phosphorylation of Chk1 protein at Ser317 and Ser345 causes DNA damage-dependent G2 checkpoint activation. The Chk1 checkpoint kinase is activated following DNA damage. Here we show that the phosphorylation of Ser317 and Ser345, two major sites of Chk1, is required for DNA damage-dependent G2 checkpoint activation in response to ionizing radiation and etoposide, but not UV. The phosphorylation is not required for Chk1's checkpoint function in response to replication stress. Furthermore, in contrast to the requirement for p34-Cdc2 kinase activation in promoting Chk1-dependent checkpoint activation, the kinase activity of Cdk1 is not necessary for DNA damage-dependent checkpoint activation. In contrast, Chk1-deficient cells are hypersensitive to DNA damage and exhibit p34-Cdc2 kinase-dependent checkpoint activation. We conclude that the role of Chk1 in DNA damage-dependent checkpoint activation is due to its ability to phosphorylate a number of substrates, including Cdc25C.Dainius Kubilius Dainius Kubilius (1902, Vilnius – 1993, Vilnius) was a Lithuanian politician, one of the most popular leaders of the Lithuanian independence movement during the inter-war period.
